

REMARKS

Claims 1-62 were rejected under 35 USC § 103 as allegedly being unpatentable over U.S. Patent No. 6,085,098 to Moon et. al. (“Moon”) in view of U.S. Patent No. 6,594,484 to Hitchings (“Hitchings”). Applicants respectfully disagree and traverse these rejections for at least the following reasons.

Initially, though the Examiner takes the position that Moon discloses the claimed feature of “displaying wireless device settings”, Applicants respectfully disagree. All of the settings displayed by Moon are unrelated to the operation of a wireless device. Instead, the settings relate to the determination of a geographic location of a device which is then used to adjust calculator settings.

Applicants also note the acknowledgement by the Examiner that Moon does not disclose the steps of transmitting “selected wireless device settings to a wireless service provider; wherein displaying comprises displaying the settings within a web page.”

To overcome these deficiencies, the Office Action cites Hitchings. However, Hitchings does not overcome the deficiencies of Moon.

Hitchings appears to disclose the display of menus on a wireless device that are generated by stored scripts. Both the scripts and the menus allow a user of the device to “navigate” (in the computer sense) through an automated voicemail system and the like. Thus, any settings contained within the menu are unrelated to the operation of the wireless device itself. Instead, they relate to the “navigation” through a voicemail system which is not a part of the wireless device (see column 5, lines 30-60).

Further, Hitchings does not disclose or suggest the transmission of wireless device settings to a service provider. Instead, after a user in Hitchings selects scripts related to the navigation of a voicemail system these are sent to the voicemail system. However the scripts, etc., that are sent to the voicemail system are unrelated to the operation of the wireless device itself, i.e., they are not "selected wireless device settings" as in the claims of the present invention.

Accordingly, because neither Moon nor Hitchings discloses or suggests a method for configuring a wireless device which comprises the display of wireless device settings and the transmission of selected wireless device settings to a wireless service provider, Applicants respectfully request withdrawal of the rejections and allowance of claims 1-62.

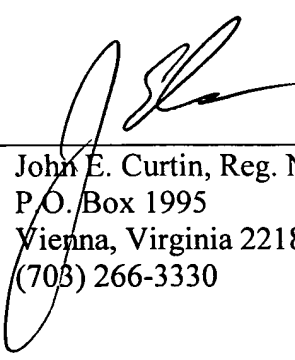

Should there be any outstanding matters that need to be resolved in the present application, the Examiner is respectfully requested to contact John E. Curtin at the telephone number listed below.

If necessary, the Commissioner is hereby authorized in this, concurrent, and future replies, to charge payment or credit any overpayment to Deposit Account No. 50-3777 for any additional fees required under 37 C.F.R. § 1.16 or under 37 C.F.R. § 1.17; particularly, extension of time fees.

Respectfully submitted,
